The dot.com crash of 2000 was a wake-up call, and told us that the Web has far to go before achieving the acceptance predicted for it in '95. A large part of what is missing is quality; a primary component of the missing quality is usability. The Web is not nearly as easy to use as it needs to be for the average person to rely on it for everyday information, commerce, and entertainment. In response to strong feedback from readers of GUI BLOOPERS calling for a book devoted exclusively to Web design bloopers, Jeff Johnson calls attention to the most frequently occurring and annoying design bloopers from real web sites he has worked on or researched. Not just a critique of these bloopers and their sites, this book shows how to correct or avoid the blooper and gives a detailed analysis of each design problem. Hear Jeff Johnson's interview podcast on software and website usability at the University of Canterbury (25 min.) Discusses in detail 60 of the most common and critical web design mistakes, along with the solutions, challenges, and tradeoffs associated with them. Covers important subject areas such as: content, task-support, navigation, forms, searches, writing, link appearance, and graphic design and layout. This book brings together 12 of the world's most talented web designers to share their secrets with the reader. The techniques discussed cover the full spectrum of essential web design topics, and readers will find enough innovation inside that they will keep coming back to the book again and again to improve their work. Bachelor Thesis from the year 2020 in the subject Computer Science - Miscellaneous, grade: 89.0, Nanjing University of Science and Technology, course: Computer Science and Technology, language: English, abstract: The main goal of this project is to create an efficient digital student platform with features where students will be able to keep track and organize their tasks and events, and can also serve as a student portal in which they will be able to view their grades, taken courses, and teachers. This is done to maximize student productivity and efficiency by utilizing modern web technologies to create a web-based application that would serve this purpose. Another goal of this project is to increase practical knowledge and improve technical expertise using modern web development tools and technologies currently used in the industry. These include web frameworks such as the PHP framework Laravel and the JavaScript framework Vue.js, both of which will be researched and utilized in the construction of this project. This objective is executed by designing and implementing the student platform web-based single-page application mentioned above while learning and using the modern web development tools to gain technical skills and knowledge at the same time, both of which will be very valuable for years to come for future endeavors in the web development industry.

"Banners, as a form of advertising on the web, are important for business.

Conversely customers want to navigate the site without being distracted by irrelevant or annoying ads. Design and placement of banners is not well understood and 'banner blindness,' which occurs when users overlook the banner entirely, is what causes the ineffectiveness of the banner. This study employs eye tracking to investigate how banner background color and the banner's relevance to users' tasks influence banner blindness. Eye movements were collected for users performing several tasks and viewing banners in a task-free context. Different banners were counterbalanced with task order. Findings on viewing behavior and user preference based on both questionnaires and eye tracking analysis offered evidence that banner background color and relevance did not influence banner viewing behavior. Through the use of eye tracking, we attempt to identify the effectiveness of banners on a website and offer recommendations for redesign

Web Services are the state of the art technology used currently in Internet-based systems such as e-business systems. However, security issues are becoming more important for the continuity of the provided services. Solutions such as Role-Based Access Control (RBAC) and Trust-Based Access Control are proposed to address threats to security in single Web Service scenarios. These solutions don't fully provide the required security level in situations involving to composite Web Services. This thesis discusses a new security approach related to composite Web Services and proposes a solution that combines Role-Based and Trust-Based Access Controls. Clients are assigned global roles, based on attributes they have, issued and signed by a Role Authority in order to gain access to certain web services. In addition, trust levels per access attempt are dynamically calculated to guarantee the required trust level needed for secure service access. The calculation of trust levels is done on two levels: locally, inside the provider of the web service, based on previous access attempts and the behavior of the client, and remotely by contacting other providers in order to obtain an approximate initial trust level for new clients.

This work presents and compares various options regarding server architecture from two separate points of view: first, that of the information technology decision-maker who must choose a solution matching company business requirements, and second, that of the systems architect who finds himself between the rock of changes in hardware and software technologies and the hard place of changing business needs. Different aspects of server architecture are presented, from databases designed for parallel architectures to high-availability systems, touching en route on often neglected performance aspects. René's book will answer the following questions critical to server architecture design, implementation, and management and more... . Given the shift to widespread use of Intel microprocessors, is the importance of hardware architecture, once the province of systems manufacturers, tending to decrease? . Given that they are extremely complex to implement, will MPP architectures be confined to scientific and technical markets? . Are RISC processors dead, killed by Intel? .
