I have the ResMed AirSense A10 AutoSet. I started out in Auto mode, and after I found out what pressure works best for me, I switched it to fixed pressure mode. My wife has a S9 and still runs it in Auto mode. I think for people who have significant central apnea a fixed pressure may work better than an auto pressure machine.

I've tried a variety of other snoring remedies - breathe right strips, wedge pillow to elevate my head, in-nose devices, mouth taping, chin strap. I even had radiofrequency turbinate reduction as I thought might be a contributing cause - I can breathe much better through my nose, but no change in snoring.

The S9 pressure was set at 11 and I've never had any reason to change it. Every morning I check the machine for the night's AHI and it's always been good: usually between 1.3 and 3.5 or so. Once or twice a month it'll hit 4+. Maybe 2 or 3 times a year it will go above 5. I think I hit 6 one time. But the S9 has gotten old.
